PERSONAL INFORMATION

Ethnicity: Taiwanese American

Citizenship: United States

Languages: English, Mandarin, Taiwanese

Age of immigration: 3-years-old

LICENSED CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGIST

CA Psychology License Number: 19967

(since 2004)

RESEARCH EXPERTISE

My research interests include ethnic, racial, and cultural issues in mental health and conceptualizations of mental illness, with an emphasis on affective disorders. Specifically, I am an expert in cultural competence and the cultural adaptation of mental health services. I also research health disparities, the prevalence and etiology of psychopathology across ethnic populations, ethnic differences in the expression of distress, cross-cultural validity of diagnostic and assessment instruments, and differential pathways to care.

CLINICAL EXPERTISE

I have a small part-time private practice in Pasadena and Claremont. For my practice, my clinical specialty is in treating mood disorders, relationship and family problems, traumas, adjustment, and personal growth and development. I work with adults, adolescents, couples, and families. I also have an expertise on the relationship between culture and mental health issues. I take an integrative cognitive-behavioral, psychodynamic, and solution-focused approach to treating clients, and conduct therapy in English, Mandarin, or Taiwanese. I also serve as a consult, as well as an expert witness in legal cases.

Book Reviewed by: Tanaka-Matsumi, J. (2017). Top-down and bottom-up frameworks for developing culturally adapted psychotherapy. PsycCRITIQUES, 62(12), 1-5. Abstract: The book guides the reader on a well-paved road of research and practice to the first evidence-based, culturally adapted psychotherapy for Chinese Americans with depression. Hwang developed a culturally-informed depression treatment program based on the integration of the top-down theory-driven Psychotherapy Adaptation and Modification Framework (PAMF) and a bottom-up community based framework, the Formative Method for Adapting Psychotherapy (FMAP). These dual frameworks integrate science and practice within a culturally embedded context of psychotherapy. This review highlights both culture-specific (emic) and culture-general (etic) aspects of culturally adapting psychotherapy and echoes Chinese-derived principles of wise action and healthy life as forming integral parts of holistic cognitive behavior therapy to treat depression among Chinese Americans. Culturally Adapting Psychotherapy for Asian Heritage Populations: An Evidence-based Approach is highly recommended for both practitioners and researchers as well as educators and trainers of psychotherapy with a focus on ethno-cultural diversity issues.

EXAMPLES OF FORENSIC CONSULTING

- 1) Client v. Electrical Systems and Instrumentation, Inc. (June 2015 – $5,000,000 settlement) (Law firm: Panish, Shea, & Boyle, LLP: Lead attorneys Rahul Ravipudi, Kevin Boyle, & Robert Glassman) – Lawsuit for loss of family member. Settlement for the family of a 52-year old man who suffered fatal injuries while working as an electrician. Assessed family for psychological impact of loss. Provided intake, assessment, and prognostic reports. Only expert witness on the case and also played role of treatment provider role. Coordinated with other treating mental health professionals.
- 2) Client v. Southern California Gas Company, et al. (June 2014 - $19.8 million verdict) (Law firm: Panish, Shea, & Boyle, LLP: Lead attorneys Rahul Ravipudi, Kevin Boyle, & Robert Glassman) – Lawsuit for personal injuries sustained by a resident in a gas explosion caused by a gas leak in his home. The plaintiff suffered severe second and third degree burns across a large portion of his body, as well as major depression, PTSD, and brain injury. I provided expert testimony and was the treating clinical psychologist. I played a major role in coordinating care and among several healthcare practitioners, discussing the interactive nature of comorbid physical and mental health problems, developing a future prognostic plan, providing clinical assessment and treatment, and developing a life care plan. This was the largest personal injury jury verdict in history against SoCalGas.
